Glenhale

Glenhale, a market town, is located in the midlands of Ireland with easy access to a motorway offering connectivity to two large cities. It is steeped in architectural and historical heritage with a castle and gardens attracting tourists during the summer months. The town has a very active historical society who have identified a number of sites which, if developed, could increase the town's tourism potential.

Glenhale has a business and innovation park on the outskirts of the town. There is potential for growth in the pharmaceutical and food sectors. Enterprise Ireland and the IDA are actively seeking appropriate enterprises to occupy the last remaining business units to ensure there are adequate job opportunities for local people. The local education and training centres are offering courses relevant to the pharmaceutical and food sectors, attracting students from outside the town.

The town has five primary schools and one large co-educational secondary school. Three of the primary schools are located in the town centre. During school drop off and collection times there is major traffic congestion and the town is inaccessible to the local people trying to get to work or use the businesses in the town. Business owners have complained that it is affecting footfall, sales and ability to recruit staff. Fewer businesses are setting up in the town centre due to issues with traffic congestion, including major international retailers who chose alternative towns.

To maintain the vibrancy and vitality of the town centre, the Glenhale Improvement Team was formed which consisted of all local major stakeholders. At its inaugural meeting many issues were identified including the areas of traffic congestion in the town. Developing tourism potential and securing suitable industry for the area were also discussed.

The Glenhale Improvement Team set about undertaking a public consultation process to identify the concerns and suggestions of the local community in relation to the development of the town centre. Locals were surveyed for their thoughts.

After analysing the suggestions put forward the Glenhale Improvement Team have prioritised and costed some of the suggestions made and created a number of action plans to put these projects in place. They communicate with the local townspeople about their progress via an email mailing list, a dedicated website and social media accounts. They also use these channels to appeal for volunteers to assist with certain aspects of the projects. They have appealed to local businesses to stay open while the traffic congestion solutions are being put in place. The Glenhale Improvement Team model is a collaborative approach which has promoted genuine solutions to sustain and revive the town centre.
